Treatment Options for Arthritis in Dogs

Adequan

Injectable arthritis treatment for dogs that helps relieve pain and repair joints.

Librela

Monthly injectable osteoarthritis medication for dogs targeting nerve growth factor.

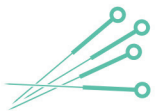

Rimadyl

Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drug (NSAID) for pain and inflammation relief in dogs.

Galliprant

NSAID that specifically targets the EP4 receptor, easing pain and inflammation.

Acupuncture

Traditional Chinese medicine technique using needles to stimulate specific points and alleviate pain.

Laser Therapy

Non-invasive treatment using light to reduce pain and inflammation, and promote healing.

Supplements

Additives containing glucosamine and chondroitin, that support joint health (Dasuquin or Joint Ease).

Nutrition

Specialized diets and food plans formulated to maintain optimal joint health and manage arthritis.

Before beginning any arthritis treatment, we highly recommend a thorough physical exam and, if possible, x-rays to ensure an accurate diagnosis. If you've noticed your pet "slowing down," having difficulty with stairs, or showing reluctance to jump, these could be signs of arthritis.
